Tina Weirather is a retired Olympic champion skier from Liechtenstein and one of the top 3 athletes worldwide in the discipline of downhill, super giant slalom and giant slalom.

Tina took the skiing world by storm after making her debut in 2005 in the FIS Alpine Ski World Cup aged only 16. Despite sustaining ligament injuries during training, she went onto compete in the 2018 Beijing Olympics, winning a bronze medal. Tina retired in 2019 and now hosts a hugely popular skiing show on the Swiss TV network SRF. In her new career, Tina has established herself as an accomplished authority on sports presenting and commentating, with a loyal and growing fanbase among the skiing community.

Combined with her ongoing passion for nurturing and empowering young adults in their personal development and growth, Tina's unique and natural effort as a person of influence brings freshness and honesty to an industry in which she is thriving.
